

The Orchid Project was founded in 1987 in Lisbon by Marta Silva. Its first goal was to protect wild orchids on the Portuguese coast.

The greenhouse in Bergen keeps a constant temperature of 21 degrees Celsius. It grows 40 species of orchids and is open to visitors on weekends.

In 2015 the project received a grant of 2.5 million euros from the Nordic Council. The money paid for a new seed bank and three research positions.
